UNION LECTURE COURSE.—The young people of the Union Society at the Landing are just completing arrangements for a course of four lectures upon popular and practical subjects, to be given in their lecture room, commencing on next Tuesday evening, May 5th, when the first will be delivered by Mr. Gilbert Nash, on "Early Commerce," a subject of special interest and importance to a trading community like ours. It will be followed by Rev. Edward S. Hutton, acting pastor of the church, Frank W. Lewis, Esq., a new comers among us but favorably known, and fourth, Hon. Edward Avery, of East Weymouth, whose lecture is sure to prove entertaining and instructive. The subject and time of delivery of each will be duly announced.

While the primary object of the course will be the benefit of their Sunday School Library, the lectures themselves will be of general interest enough to enlist the attention of the whole community, and perhaps, if sufficiently encouraged, result in a fuller course during the next season. The price of admission has been placed very low, fifty cents for the course, and twenty cents for a single lecture, so that there need be no complaint on account of the cost.

We have had no popular lectures in our village for a long time, and it is to be hoped that this interesting series will meet the approval of such a number of learners. The lectures will be well worth the hearing, and we trust will secure a full attendance.

FUNERAL PARADE.—The members of Delphi Lodge, Knights of Pythias, accompanied by the Weymouth land, paraded last Sunday afternoon, a tribute of respect to the memory of a brother of the Lodge, Mr. Fred A. Leads, who died on Friday, after a lingering illness. Accompanying the Knights, a tribune of the Weymouth land, paraded last Sunday afternoon, a tribute of respect to the memory of a brother of the Lodge, Mr. Fred A. Leads, who died on Friday, after a lingering illness. Accompanying the Knights, a tribune of the Weymouth land, paraded last Sunday afternoon, a tribute of respect to the memory of a brother of the Lodge, Mr. Fred A. Leads, who died on Friday, after a lingering illness.

THE LECTURE OF MRS. YOUNG.—At Weymouth, Town Hall, last Friday evening, was very highly attended, but those who were present expressed their entire satisfaction with the lecture, Mrs. Young being a very gifted and interesting speaker.

THE BENEFIT CONCERT AT EAST WEYMOUTH.—Thursday last, the Weymouth land, paraded last Sunday afternoon, a tribute of respect to the memory of a brother of the Lodge, Mr. Fred A. Leads, who died on Friday, after a lingering illness. Accompanying the Knights, a tribune of the Weymouth land, paraded last Sunday afternoon, a tribute of respect to the memory of a brother of the Lodge, Mr. Fred A. Leads, who died on Friday, after a lingering illness.

AT THE TEA PARTY OF THE UNION MUSICAL SOCIETY.—The exercises of the evening were so suddenly and mournfully terminated by the sudden death of Hon. John W. Lusk, who had been arranged to give a lecture on the subject of "Early Commerce," a subject of special interest and importance to a trading community like ours. It will be followed by Rev. Edward S. Hutton, acting pastor of the church, Frank W. Lewis, Esq., a new comers among us but favorably known, and fourth, Hon. Edward Avery, of East Weymouth, whose lecture is sure to prove entertaining and instructive.

CONFIRMATION.—A large concourse of Catholic residents of Weymouth and adjoining towns, was gathered at East Weymouth, last Sunday afternoon, at the house of the Rev. Father, to receive the sacrament of Confirmation. The church was filled to overflowing, and the exercises were conducted with the usual solemnity and devotion.

CONCRETE WALKS.—As will be seen by advertisement, Mr. S.W. Guttererson, of Weymouth, is prepared to promptly fill all orders for concrete walks, curbs, etc., and from personal experience we can assure our readers that these walks are the most inexpensive, enduring and cleanest of any kind of footway, and have given perfect satisfaction in every case, as the work is done in the most thorough manner.

TRINITY PARISH.—At the annual meeting of Trinity Parish, the following officers were unanimously elected for the ensuing year:—Edward Avery, W.S. Wallace, Wardens. John M. Walsh, C.N. Wallace, L.M. Pratt, C.A. Chessman, Miss Fannie Jackson, Vestry.

NIGHT WATCH.—The Selection of Weymouth has engaged Mr. L.D. Pettis, of South Weymouth, as night watchman for the Landing, an office greatly needed in the village.

FESTIVAL.—Notwithstanding the unfavorable weather, the attendance at the festival of the Social Circle of the Baptist Society, last Wednesday evening, was good, and the bows, aprons and refreshments met with rapid sale. The musical entertainment by Misses W. and M. Raymond, and Messrs. Raymond, Burdell and Porter, of East Weymouth, was very satisfactory, and the piano duos by Messrs. Willie Burdell and Arthur M. Raymond, fully displayed the fine qualities of the Square Grand IIallet & Davis piano, presented to the Society by M.C. Dizer, Esq. The entertainment was reported as evening with change of programme.

Funeral of Hon. John W. Lusk.—The obsequies over the remains of Hon. John W. Lusk, whose sudden death was recorded last week, took place Saturday afternoon, April 25, in the house of worship of the Union Religious Society, Weymouth, and Brantree, at 2 o'clock. The house was filled with the gathering of relatives and friends of the deceased, and the entire community with sympathy for the bereaved family.

The funeral was largely represented in the assembly of mourners. The altar was beautifully decorated with flowers and plants, and the service was conducted with the usual solemnity and devotion. The Rev. Father, who officiated, delivered a fitting eulogy on the life and character of the deceased.

South Weymouth Matters.—Charles Littlefield, whose feeble health was mentioned in last week's Gazette, died last Monday evening, at his home, after a long and painful illness. He was a native of Weymouth, and had been a resident of South Weymouth for many years. He was a man of great energy and ability, and had been a member of the Weymouth Board of Health for several years.

MEMORIAL DISCOURSE.—Sabbath afternoon following the day of funeral, Rev. E. Hutton, pastor of the Union Society, delivered an appropriate memorial sermon, from which we are unable to give the discourse in full. It was a most interesting and profitable discourse, and was well received by the congregation.

The Newspaper Man.
Little they know, or even think
Of the work there is in shedding ink
By the busy wielders of pencil and pen—
Generally known as newspaper men—
Feeling that they know a little of the "pieces of Life."
"Variations," and rumors rise,
"Saturday News" and "Sunday News,"
"All Sorts of Paragraphs," to amuse,
Market reports and marine disasters,
Pure and as the theatre in white clover,
Clew-hammer cost and open hat;
Then to the pricing, where you write
The leading editors of a black night—
Back to the city, just in time
To report the ex-omn of some devins;
Sicambot-sollition, smash-up of trains,
Election returns to bother your brains;
To write his star to theatrical glory,
Debate and marriages, murders, rows,
Balls and parties, minstrel shows,
Black speckles, names of names of air,
Tossed up by bull and led by dog;
Praising the timb in the dancer's pose,
And next the calves in the cattle show;
Pencil in hand at the racing course,
Fishing the fish and the fish of the fish;
Jottings down each stroke and catch
Made in a famous base-ball match;
Now of a street row taking a note—
And then of a row in a college boat,
And then of a row in a college boat,
At which the tireless pencil swings.

CORA'S DELUSION.

Cora Depeyster pruned for a prince. Not a common pine like the snuffy old Russian we used to see, wearing a greasy fur-collar and long overcoat, cutting a goodly figure in the street at times diurnally, and growing at everything Russian in the most detestable English. Nothing of the kind.

She pinned for a prince such as we read about in the sentimental novels that nestled our fathers' fingers in the flower of their youth; a Thaddeus of Warsaw, all talent, and pallor, and tenderness, and musical voice, and flax, rolling eyes, and pedigree, and that sort of thing.

For my part I don't believe in such princes. The Prince of Wales isn't one of that species, and I'm afraid the breed has gone out with the fine old sentimental novels. Nothing else, however, would suit Miss Cora Depeyster.

Being not totally unlike other fair demons of twenty or thereabouts, she desired to experiment upon the state matter of the propriety of the particularities, but common sense would not allow a prince she must have or single she would remain.

Now, a real good writer of sentimental novels could create such a being, especially for the emergency, and, after the enormous amount of sentimentaliza-tion through the medium of an obstinate parent or what not, marry off Miss Cora to a prince or a duke, and she would be style. But I never was good at sentimental creation. I must write about people I know and see. I am sorry for the Coras. I've seen lots of them; but they are not the Coras I wrote of. Oh, one not worth tea, for a sharp-nosed

A great change came over Cora. She was sad and gay by fits; irritable and changeable, and incomprehensible to herself. There is no use wasting words about it.
She was in love. Her prince had come.
The next day he was in the city, and developed. He gave suppers in his room to the young bloods, and organized picnics parties in the woods thereabouts, which made the belles of the city look at him with admiration and fear. To Cora's intense delight he made her in some sort the central

red-headed life-insurance agent. Another is the spouse of a strapping farmer, who loves to hunt and puts in his spare time with his gun and dog. The third is a young, blond, well-subbed German who plays second clarinet in a cheap orchestra, and has to move monthly because he can't pay rent. Still another is a young, blond, good-looking fellow who has a good logno grogue melancholy. Thus with all the Coras. They go on pining for prizes who never come; marring all the good people who never come; giving away a fresh race of Coras, to follow in their wamm's footsteps with a disregard of experience that savors of

On the southwest of watering-places is Happy Valley. It is romantic and comfortable at once. There is delightful bathing, rowing, sailing, and fishing for oneself, and the shore is green and blue like the sky, and green and mysterious, and suggestive of dryads and nymphs and fairies and gnomes. That is, if you happen to be of a romantic turn of mind. If not, they only suggest irritations.

I will not further expatiate upon the delights of Happy Valley, lest it should be fancied that I have lots for sale in the neighbourhood, which is not the case;—not even a burial lot; and that, I believe, is the common lot of all.

Neither did Cora Depew have any real reason to be jealous, but she was. The day and passed much like the time every summer in the fair demesnes that lie smilingly adjacent to the Happy Valley Pavilion.

Understanding the round of pleasures in which she every summer took prominent part, she could not stifle her inward and continuous yearning for the love of a prince, and she had a devotion from princely eyes, the touch of a princely hand in the dance, and the sweet envy of all maidens who had to go princess through life.

It was the closing up of the season, and the next day there was to be a general exodus of the Happy Valley people to their homes. Cora felt that she was to leave the place and it had been there. The hitherto put-up devotion of Montgomery Smythe the vent of last year's declaration and a proposition. He was a young man, a little over thirty, and having been accepted with a good many blisses and tears, just as it was in all well-written novels, he had been loved by a girl who had come from his confidential agent to Europe compelled him to start him-the great world a cold, hard, unromantic sort of an arrangement.

Of course, you and I know better. But I never met a man who was as wonderful as the simplest life cannot be made were it truly told. The only trouble is that the simplest life cannot be truly told. It seems easy, but you try it once!

Though there was no prince among the Pavlov borders, there was a poet. Arthur Bayne was there. It is barely possible that Gough might have fallen in love with him; there is something very low and hyaline—in the expression—in a young lady's idea of a poet. But then Arthur Bayne was altogether too good for her. He was a poet, a poet for Paris, and urged her to marry him at once, without waiting for a through form of marriage. The expression of her grandeur in consulting her friends was he not Montgomerie Smythe? and who could possibly be so good as to marry her?

It is very possible that Cora might have consented, so infuriated was she by her prince, but she had read that the regular thing was to demand time for consideration, so she postponed her decision until it was really too late, made, until evening.

As they reached the piazza, he was tapping his glossy boot with his toe, and she was looking at him with a look of a blackest, black-marked world too well to believe in its hollow-ness. He had found it in fact a very round, hard, and stubborn sort of thing.

"I am glad that men who have really been shaken up a bit in the merry-go-round we call life are not apt to preserve the outside show of sentimentalism, and to be able to cry out, 'I am the father of, some time or another, with long hair, our turn-down collars, our little suits, our bright hats, and our little hidden sorrows; but when we have cut our hair, and put on our suits, and hats, and about other folks' trouble we always come back to reason, to plain realities, to slow-pipe hats and the barber."

and she too sentimental for him from any hyphenated point of view, yet they somehow became very excellent and intimate friends. They were sitting when they sat on the shore of the little lake together. Cora was gazing at the moon, of course. She was one of that class who, when they are alone, will think of a hero, she had imagined for her heart history, and described the prince with his melting eyes and misty smile, and she would gaze at the moon, and the moon would be the beneficent air, his mild melancholy and some time. I have his photograph here, miss, if you'd like to see it."

"And he proffered a carte de visite the very first thing he saw. The moment stowed away among her treasures."

"There isn't any mistake at all, miss, is there?" said the detective, grimly.

"But for what?—for what he is—is he arrested?" faltered the poor girl.

"Why, miss, you see, he left California too suddenly, with all these cash on the premises of the Pacific Hotel. He hasn't passed through the hands of five thousand dollars more in jewelry, belonging to the hoarders of the house."

"But, Mr. Smythe—"

"Smythe! that isn't his name, Miss. He's plain Bill Higgins, fancy bar-keeper of the Pacific. I'm very sorry for you, miss, but you've got to know any ladies who you were with. Good-morning."

"She looked at Montgomery Smythe, but did not raise her eyes nor open his mouth. Plainly, the detective had told the truth. She turned to the hotel, happily, the whole affair had ceased to bother her."

Montgomery Smythe was already on his way to the depot, arm in arm with a woman, who was leaning over his shoulder in the road Carra took a last, and farewell look at her prince. The shock made her seriously ill, and when she Arthur Bayne was not the man to triumph over the fall of any one. On the contrary, he was too generous, and too unselfish, to allow himself to be about this unfortunate episode in Cors's existence he married her before she shut their mouths.

The accounts which reach us from the lowlands bordering on the Mississippi and its tributaries indicate that every action is taken to relieve the necessities of the unfortunate people who have suffered by the floods, there may be numerous deaths from actual starvation. A writer in the Memphis Appeal, just returned from a trip down the river, writes that he has seen that during a season of forty years in that region he never before witnessed such a scene of devastation, and the

and a party of eight men fifty-five miles up the river, where they were intended to make for a point where the outlaws would be likely to be intercepted. Both parties are as familiar with the topography of the country as the Indians, and it is thus expected that one of the parties would succeed in having an encounter with the outlaws.

With the single exception of Joaquin Murietta, whose career was sufficiently bright to claim his name in San Jose, after a long series of murders and outrages of every conceivable description, Vazquez is the most thoroughly hardened ruffian that ever terrorized the country at El Paso. What all of Murietta's bloodthirstiness, daring, and determination, Vazquez combines a shrewdness and low cunning infinitely superior to that of that infamous lowlife. In fact, more than the average stock of intelligence allotted to his class, the water was rising. Many pine trees were uprooted and the water was one grade extending as far as the eye could reach. At other points the levees were broken in many places, and the water was pouring through the breaches. The water was so high that some tracts of fertile lands have been submerged and ruined for present use, and the inhabitants, both white and black, are suffering for clothing and food. The water is so high that it has flooded into the bottom at least season from the old States are left in absolute destitution, without money and without prospect of employment, many are now seeking to get out of the country to the former homes. Cattle and hogs, horses and mules, even barnyard fowls, have died from starvation, and a great dis-result of long association and contact with the white people. He says that a young man, slightly above the average height, complexion and born in the old town of Monterey, Sheriff Wasson, who, in conjunction with Sheriff Adams, of Santa Clara, has been active in any gentlemanly way, was taken into the jail or captivity, Vasquez, told a Post article some time ago, in a conversation about Vasquez that when a boy he did not visit his mother, but that he was a "white" man, and that he was a "bloodthirsty" monster which he thought was a sort of good-for-nothing, less self, very seldom or never would prefer, to hang around the streets of the city, and he was continually moving about between San Diego, Los Angeles, Monterey, to Memphis and St. Louis has become completely impoverished. Further South the ruin is still more overwhelming. In Louisiana especially the ravages of the floods have been the most disastrous. All along the river the local merchants have been compelled to close their stores; they can no longer give credit, and the people are left staring thousands of helpless men, women, and children in the face.

Little by Little.

If you are gaining little by little every may be contented with a business less than your income, so that, though it be little by little, you are yet constantly accumulating and growing richer and richer every day." He concluded, so his countrymen were all agreeing well.

"Are you gaining knowledge every day? Though it be little by little, the aggregate of the accumulation, when it comes to the end of the year, will drag something to the stock, will be surprising to yourself."

Solomon did not become the wisest man in the world in a minute. Little by little, he became a man of wisdom, even for a single day—always reading, always studying a little beforehand. He was not the first who was heard of Vasquez until the horrible tragedy at Tres Pinos. Before that on the evening of the 25th of August, 1857, a party of six men, with their horses, rode up to the store of A. J. & J. H. Trent, twelve miles from Hollister, to cross-road from Tres Pinos to Monte Rio. Here they compassed their way into the store, and on the floor, tied their arms behind their backs and plained their legs. Assassins then went outside and three men, who were to stay, were made to lie down, and were shod cold blood. The first shot was a Portuguese sheep-herder, L. Davidson, proprietor of the hotel adjoining, a the two fine of rising up in the morning and laying down at night; and to accumulate a little storehouse of knowledge.

Finally, are you daily improving in character? Be not discouraged by a few little faults. They are but a far short of what they themselves would wish to be. It is something, if it is much, if you keep your good resolutions, and do not allow yourself to get better this week than you did last, better this year than you did last year. Strive to be perfect, but do not become discouraged by a few little imperfections. You will be little less than perfect.

Little by little knowledge is gained: little by little character and reputation are built up. Little by little the man is made; therefore do not be discontent, but press on. Do not despise the day of small things. Little things make the grand aggregate of true worth.

Sad Case of Hydrophobia.

Maggie Lowenthal, aged 8 years, who lived at Oldham, near Paterson, was bitten about five weeks ago by a small dog. The slight wound soon healed, but a few days ago she suddenly went mad, and, with the sight of a glass of water, Dr. Neer of Paterson was that I am going to die, for she is crying just as hard as she can!"

"What?" asked the woman, her moistening eyes and listened away. Maggie ran back into the house. She was soon seated with another convulsion which resulted fatally.

by her to turn State's evidence, which resulted in the conviction of Antonio Vazquez for murder in the second degree.

Since the time of the murder at Tres Pinos there have been a thousand reports of a "Black Legion" would. At one time he was seen in Virginia City. The next day an eminently "reliable" citizen saw him near San Juan. The following day he was seen in the city. Intelligence that he was spending his ill-gotten coin in Okonoma. There can be no question of his "Black Legion" movement. He was seen on a place or an individual like a Cossack, and was off as rapidly. Some time ago he was seen in the city. He was seen in Francisco, in the disguise of a woman, and that he went away on the Mexican steamer. It has been positively ascertained that he was seen in the city. An open question as to whether he was there at the time stated. The Legislature, as an incentive to the State, has offered a reward of $15,000 for the capture of a gang; $3,000 of the money was to be paid for Vazquez alive, and $2,000 dead.

Lost in Life.

The feeling of intense loneliness that often comes to a man in a great city has been frequently noted and moralized by philosophical writers. The companionship that Nature gives to the man who is lonely is not to be had in the city.

walled out by the arid brick and stone of the leafless town, and to realize when thus isolated that in all the swarming throngs of the city, among the busy, bustling streets you have not one friend or acquaintance; that not one of them is all aware of your personality in life or will give a thought to your death, is to know that you are alone.

Then, again, how suggestive is the fact that even the fellow-citizens of each place as London, Paris, and New York may live for years in the same street with—aye, in the very next house to—yourself, and never so much as know each other's name.

And when hundreds of thousands of men and women are at once so near and so far—physically near, like the countless throngs of the city, and yet so isolated as those same trees—they are really but as many intricacies of a world-wide human wilderness in which brother may be lost to brother, lover to lover, friend to friend.

mate of value of his property, been found in connection with the assessment valuation of the property.

When it was by Mr. Hammet.

When it had been generally known that the murderer had been captured, the greatest excitement prevailed, and the Tombs in Allegheny were soon filled with the throngs of the people.

It seemed that efforts would be made to liberate the prisoner, and it was necessary to place a strong guard of men along the corridors of the Tombs, and to have the appearance was not calculated to impress one favorably. This was a man who murdered a family of five for the life of about five feet eight inches, but he is heavily built, and his face is a big, round, bull head, rather broad, flat nose, low forehead and small eyes. His face, he said, appears puffed up by drink, and bears every evidence of having been is all the leverage he had that night. After quitting the saloon he went to grocery store and bought some groceries ready for the Hamann children. He then goes on and tells following story to the press representatives through an interpreter:

"I am very sorry my wife told me that I must have Hammet's money; thought he had a great deal of money in the house, and I felt so queer about it, I went directly to the house, don't know how I got there. I said, 'I must have been out of my mind.'"

What Causes Fever.

Prof. Backman, of England, claims to have discovered one of the causes of typhoid fever. A family in his neighborhood was attacked with the disease. He made a search of the premises, a spout in the family pump was found to be covered with a sort of gelatinous matter. Submitting this to microscopical examination it was found to be a fungoid growth, from which spores were constantly washed away by the flowing water. He followed up this discovery by a minute examination of the outside of the pump, through which the drainage of the town

There were two beds in the room in a corner and children, near the ceiling, both of the little girls were sleeping except one cautiously to whom I clambered and I dealt her forever, never moved a muscle; she was dead a minute. I then raised the next struck at Ennie. She uttered a scream, the second time. She was now grown up.

"After this I went down stairs and positioned just inside the door of room adjoining the kitchen, and

The woman questioned again. "A young man who wished to marry a young girl, who was engaged to him at Christmas, was obliged, in order to get the necessary papers, to swear that the lady was of lawful age; and although it was a falsehood, he swore it before the judge, and was sworn in as the legal deputy being a woman. The new-made mother-in-law was not pleased at the match, and vented her indignation by having the young man flogged, and then she was put in prison, and although the defendant's counsel argued that a woman being incompetent to administer an oath no perjury was committed, the court was of opinion that the oath and the insult were justified. proceeded at once to the railroad and walked direct to Pittsburgh. I stopped at several places but don't know the names of the places. I came over to Pittsburgh and went to see my friend Baler, on Pennsylvania street, I think. I don't know locations very well. I was never in Pittsburgh more than three times. After leaving Baler's, I crossed over to Allegheny City. I crossed a covered bridge and went to several breweries to get work. I purchased a suit of clothes and finally was arrested."

It has been ascertained that the parents of Ortelwe, who live in Stuttgart, are well off. During the Franco-Prussian war he was drafted, but deserted and came to this country.

One of the closing acts in this dreadful tragedy was the consigning to the grave of the remains of the murdered family. There were two coffins, the largest of which held the remains of Mr. and Mrs. Hammet and the two children, Ida and Emma. In another and smaller coffin lay Bobbie Smith. These horrible objects were kept undisturbed until after the ceremonies were concluded in the church. The edifice was filled to overflowing with anguished men and women who, in a great measure, were neighbors of the murdered family.

A Woman as a Lawyer.

A correspondent recalls an incident

In the District Court at Washington, happening thirty years ago, when I had great American litigant, Mrs. Myra Clark Gaines, was more beautiful if not less intelligent than she is now. One of her cases was in progress before Judge Buchanan, and the lawyers, of fouled at the court's rulings, of wrangling among themselves, withdrew. Mrs. Gaines and her warrior lawyer were present, the General attracted in full uniform, his sword clashing on the floor at his every movement. When the lawyers withdrew, the state-ly General, leading his wife to the bar, addressed the court. He said that he was educated for the bar, and in early youth impressed with the profoundest reverence for the civil courts of his country. Perhaps, he continued, in the view of the world and of the court, it would be his duty to supply the place of his wife's lawyers. If it were a duty that he thought himself adequate to perform, he would not shrink from it, for the lady, hosienda being his wife, was the daughter of his old friend, Daniel Clark, to whom he was bound, by many ties of ancient friendship and warm esteem, to render every possible service in the maintenance of the rights of his friendless daughter. This service he should be bound as a soldier and a gentleman to render to any lady in like circumstances. But as the lady was far more able to argue her case than he was, he begged that she be allowed to conduct her own case. Having thus delivered himself, the chivalrous old chap gently tapped his sword, and turning to the opposing counsel remarked:—"For whatever the lady shall say or do, I hold myself responsible to the full measure and in every manner recognizable among gentlemen." The judge was not at all displeased with the General's bearing, and reminded him that a display of military pomp and menace could not be allowed in that court. The General courteously begged to assure his Honor that he appeared in military dress out of respect for the court, and in strict conformity with the regulations of the service. The sword which he wore would never be drawn with more alacrity than in the defense of the civil authorities and tribunals of his country. Mrs. Gaines went in and won.

PATRIC ASSUMED.

Joseph Waltz, the murderer, who was hanged at Catekill, assaulted his keeper, Charles Ernst, in his cell, at 3 p. m. the day before the execution, by striking him on the head with a piece of iron, crushing the skull. During the week officer Ernst had guarded Waltz in his cell in order that he should commit no injury to himself. The murder was committed some time before it was discovered. The officer was found lying on the floor unconscious. The officer's revolver was in the possession of Waltz. The victim lived only fifteen minutes after medical aid was summoned. The prisoner manifested a stolid indifference as to his horrible deed. The excitement was intense and at least 2,000 persons collected around the jail, threatening to break down the doors and lynch the prisoner, and it is believed, that but for the assurance of Gov. Dix that Waltz would not be reprieved, he would have been lynched.

Did He Do It?

Some time in the month of March a little girl named Katie Curran, living in South Boston, nearly opposite the place where the Milken boy lived, disappeared suddenly and mysteriously.

Active measures were at once inaugurated in hopes of finding her alive, or at least of recovering her body. A reward was offered by the Mayor for any information that should dispel the mystery, and strenuous efforts have been making ever since, but with no avail. The affair is as dark to-day as it was at the time of its announcement. Not a word has been heard of the missing girl. It is now suggested that Pomeroy, the boy with the white eyes, knows something about this case, and it is possible that he may some day confess a connection, with the disappearance of little Katie Curran, and furnish the information to earnest searchers for her friends, and the Thought II.

An interesting story is told of the late Berj. Mott, of Alburgh, Nt. Nov. 6, 1838, Mott left his home to join the Canadian rebels under Gagnon Cote. As he went out of the house, his wife, who was unaware of his intention, asked him to bring back a pound of tea. In the battle which occurred on the next day Mott was captured, conveyed to Montreal, tried and condemned to death. His sentence was commuted to banishment to Van Dieman's Land, now Tasmania. Seven years after his capture he was restored to liberty, and PATENT CASES.—When a person buys a patented machine he acquires the privilege of using it anywhere throughout the United States and Territories. When a patentee sells a "right" for a State or territory he simply transfers to the purchaser his monopoly of the patented article in the district mentioned in the deed of sale.

The East Brantree Tragedy.
Which was developed last Sunday, by the discovery of the body of an unknown woman in the waters of the Monaquet River, at the waterfalls, has created the most intense excitement in this community during the week, and detectives and reporters have been busy in obtaining every scrap of information connected with the ghastly horror.

Discovered by Messrs. David Pellin, and Alexander White, who were in the pier about noon, and saw the lifeless and floating form in the water. They immediately called for assistance, and Mr. John Bates, with others, being near by, Mr. Bates procured a boat and brought the body ashore, which proved to be that of a woman about 30 years of age, dressed in common clothing.

The body was recovered in a lap robe, which was secured by a woman who had been in the river for some time, and in which was attached a piece of cloth, which was found to be a piece of the same material as that which was found in the water. The body was recovered in a lap robe, which was secured by a woman who had been in the river for some time, and in which was attached a piece of cloth, which was found to be a piece of the same material as that which was found in the water.

A photograph of the features of the deceased was taken by Mr. Chamberlain, after which the body was delivered to undertaker Samuel Currier, by whom it was deposited in the receiving tomb of the East Brantree cemetery. While the body lay in the engine house it was viewed by several hundred persons, who identified it, and a positive identification of the remains was not made until Tuesday morning, when two acquaintances of Mrs. Currier's house, identified the body.

On Wednesday evening, at 8 o'clock, a force of detectives came out from Boston in company with the ladies, and the developments of the case drawn from the officers for Haver, a pair of horses conveying them to the Four Corners in the "quickest time on record." There they found Mr. J. Henry Costley, late keeper of the hotel, packing his trunk for departure. When arrested, the officers found on his person a card which he had corresponding in size to the bullet in the murdered woman's head, and this, with other circumstances narrated in the daily papers, surrounded him with a cloud of suspicion, although the Haver people generally consider him innocent. He was lodged in Plymouth Jail.

A jury under the call of Coroner George W. White, was convened on Tuesday afternoon, with doors closed to the public, and was adjourned to this (Friday) afternoon. Another lady, Miss Annie Flanagan, came to Weymouth Wednesday and identified the body, the lady stating that she had formerly lived at the hotel, and that in the house was a dark closet full of rubbish, and it is surmised from this that the contents of the closet included the stolen implements used by Mr. Hovard, the former keeper of the house, among which there would not doubt be a goose corresponding to that found attached to the body.

On Thursday, Judge Dampas, of Weymouth, is to deliver an oration at Quincy, Decoration Day.

Young People's Lecture Course.
On Wednesday evening last, as announced, Hon. Edward Avery, of Brantree, delivered the third of the course of lectures, which are being given by the Young People of the Union Congregational Society of Weymouth and Brantree.

The subject of his lecture was "A Sinner in Paris." He said, travellers who have observed the condition of the people in foreign countries, are liable to fall into error in their estimate of the manners, habits and institutions of those countries, from a want of opportunities for correct observation. If the sides of a building are to be measured, and the number of its windows to be counted, this is an operation easily done, but to attain to such knowledge of the prevalent opinions, and dispositions of the people as will enable a stranger to comprehend the genius, as it were, of the people, is made more difficult, and requires a long residence among them, a familiar acquaintance with their language, and an easy intercourse among their societies.

The fourth and last lecture of the course will be delivered next Tuesday, by Stillman B. Allen, Esq., of Boston. Subject, "The Enchanted Land."

CONSECRATION OF TRINITY CHURCH.
Bishop Padwick, assisted by several clergies, consecrated the Trinity Episcopal Church at Weymouth Landing, Tuesday morning, May 27th. Services began at 10 o'clock, and were most impressive throughout. Notwithstanding the storm, a large congregation assembled to witness and participate in the rather uncommon services, for the consecration of an Episcopal Church is not an everyday occurrence in our New England towns.

THE NORFOLK COUNTY TEACHERS' ASSOCIATION.—As a report of the late meeting of this association, held at Hyde Park, has appeared in the Gazette, it seems proper that some report should be made, for the reason that Weymouth was so well represented, if for no other. Thirty-three teachers from Weymouth attended. How different from last year, when only one attended. The reason is obvious.

Yours correspondent, with several others, met with a serious misfortune, while on the way, which deprived them of a portion of the enjoyment of the occasion. Perhaps some of your readers can appreciate our feelings as we stood in the depot, and saw the train speedily move out, just as we were ready, with tickets in hand, to get aboard. Strange it is to say that we tried to make the best of it, while waiting for the next train.

The convention was generally regarded as one of the best. It was very well attended. The papers were unusually good. Some portions of the discussions were rather dull and uninteresting. Why can't every one who goes to such a place, say something worth saying, and say it in a manner worth listening to. This, however, is a casual remark thrown in by way of suggestion.

It will resemble very nearly the new church of St. Augustine, of South Boston, which, when completed, will be one of the most ornate, chaste and beautiful churches in the country. The architect is J. J. Keely, of Brooklyn. The church will cost about $50,000. Father Smith has erected in this parish a beautiful church, which is now in the process of completion. It is situated on the corner of East Weymouth and in the present, which will accommodate the people of Weymouth and Brantree, as assisted by the Rev. J. J. Keely.

North Weymouth.
Mr. Editor:—When a woman says she will, she will, you may depend on it, is the old adage, and never was there a truer exemplification of it than in the case of the "Flowerbuds" at North Weymouth. Not satisfied with the gift of a fine Hallett, Davis & Co. piano to the society, which they have purchased and paid for, they now propose to repair the organ, through renovating and enlarging it. To further this object they propose to give an entertainment on Tuesday and Wednesday evenings next, June 2nd and 3rd. On the first evening there will be a sale of useful and fancy articles in the Chapel of Rev. Mr. Smith's church. On Wednesday evening, June 3rd, there will be a grand Antiquarian Concert in costume of the year 1800. This will be held in the Church; the chorus will consist of all the young ladies of the town, and as this is the parent church of Weymouth, will comprise all our most respected citizens, many in number and strange in name.

BOAT AND SHIP BUSINESS IN THIS SECTION.
The town at the present time is almost at a stand still, although many of the manufacturers are getting out their samples for fall trade; but the prospect does not warrant much activity at present, as they are waiting for the market. The spring goods on six and eight months credit, still owe for a large proportion of these goods. Business almost everywhere is at a standstill. A letter from our esteemed friend L. Torrey, Jr., who has been traveling through the West several weeks, soliciting orders, says that he never saw a more depressed condition of the market than in the West. He says that he never saw a more depressed condition of the market than in the West. He says that he never saw a more depressed condition of the market than in the West.

DRABERY'S PHOSPHATE WORKS.
The phosphate works on Eastern Neck are doing but a limited business just now, owing mostly to the extreme cold weather which has continued to the west, and the season. Many of the largest planters in the cotton States have planted their land to corn instead of cotton, consequently the demand for phosphate is much less than it was last year. Their works are to be closed up entirely through July and August. Their factories have run day and night through the winter, and spring, and will very recently be closed up. It is a very extensive and when in full operation employs some two hundred men.

The Active at Rockland.
The second game for the Junior championship was played on the Agricultural Fair Grounds, South Weymouth, Saturday evening, May 24th. It was a very exciting game, and was won by the Active at Rockland. The score was 10 to 8. The game was played on the Agricultural Fair Grounds, South Weymouth, Saturday evening, May 24th. Brantree.
It is to be regretted that in the autumn of 1867 I contracted a severe cold and cough, and was obliged to leave the city and seek a change of air. I remained in the country for some time, but the cold and cough would not leave me. I was obliged to leave the country and seek a change of air.
